FROM THE EDITOR

University of Tennessee
Knoxville, TN 37996-0720

At the 41st meeting of the Southeastern Conference in Pensacola, I was appointed editor of the SEAC Newsletter, succeeding David H. Dye who admirably performed these duties the past 8 years.

I am taking this opportunity to solicit your assistance in gathering information and news items for future issues of the Newsletter.

I am especially interested in receiving information regarding current research and recent publications. More specifically, I would appreciate you sending me information about:

Current and recently completed field work;

Current and recently completed laboratory analysis;

Recently completed or published monographs, journal articles, site reports, project reports, masters theses, and doctoral dissertations;

Notice of annual meetings of local and state archaeological societies;

Anything else that is of interest to SEAC members.

Please do not restrict your submission to work associated with contract compliance, and please include information about both prehistoric and historic sites research.

The Newsletter contains up to 14 pages of text. I will do my best to publish everything you send me within these page limitations.

The Newsletter is issued twice a year, in the spring and fall. The deadline for submitting material for the spring issue is February 1. I must receive material for the fall issue (Vol. 27, No. 2) by August 1.

I am looking forward to serving the members of the SEAC and to receiving news items from you.

You should send your news items to:

Dr. Gerald F. Schroedl

MINUTES OF SEAC BUSINESS MEETING
November 8, 1984, Pensacola, FL

The meeting was called to order by President Chapman at 5:15 PM. He asked for, and received, approval of the minutes of the 1983 business meeting, which were published in SEAC Newsletter 26(1), 1984.

Judy Bense gave an update on the present meeting. A registration of 180 had been needed to break even. As of 5:00 PM today, 333 people had registered at $13 each, and the meeting was going well so far. (The final total was 370, a new record.)

Phyllis Morse, Chair of the Nominations Committee, announced the results of the election. The winners are: President-elect, Jerald T. Milanich; Secretary-elect, C. Roger Nance; Executive Officer II-elect, Dan F. Morse.

Treasurer Cordell gave a summary of her report, which is printed elsewhere in this issue of the Newsletter. Jim Price, ex-Treasurer in charge of the Life Memberships fund, announced that this fund has grown in 3 years from zero to almost $10,000 (it exceeded $10,000 later at this meeting). He noted that the interest rates on six certificates of deposit are from 9.95% to 13%, and that the interest will be applied to the SEAC publications fund after the $10,000 figure is exceeded.

Secretary Jeter noted that the minutes had already been approved. He stated that he had done some preliminary groundwork on future meeting sites (see below). He congratulated the victorious candidates, and (speaking as a defeated Presidential candidate) remarked, "At least, I carried Minnesota!"

Editor Marquardt stated that Vol. 3, No. 2 of Southeastern Archaeology will be mailed out in January, 1985. He noted that the first six issues contain 37 articles, 10 reviews, 18 pages of comments, and 6 pages of feature material. He has already accepted three papers for Vol. 4, No. 1. Of 86 articles submitted so far, 40 have been accepted, a success rate of 47%. The average turn-around time for acceptance/rejection has been 65 days. Some 130 reviewers have been sent 190 copies of articles for review, and 178 reviews have been received--an excellent response rate of 94%. SEAC Bulletins 20 and 21, bound together, including papers from the 1976 Tuscaloosa and 1977 Lafayette meetings, have just been published and are for sale at $15 each (10% off at this meeting). Back issue sales are proceeding slowly but surely.

Marquardt then ceremonially presented the sacred idiotronic AJAX FORCE automatic numbering machine to his successor as SEAC Editor, Vincas Steponaitis; tumultuous applause emanated from the assembled multitude.

Editor Steponaitis announced that he had made a search for a more stable production arrangement for SEAC publications, to set up a long-term relationship at a reasonable cost with a press which can handle all aspects of production under one roof. He said that the best candidate found so far is Allen Press of Lawrence, KS, publisher of Science and American Antiquity. He announced that the new editor of the SEAC Newsletter will be Gerald Schroedl of the University of Tennessee-Knoxville; his first issue will be Vol. 27, No. 1, Spring, 1985. He expressed his thanks to outgoing SEAC and Newsletter editors Marquardt and Dye: Marquardt started from scratch and developed one of the finest regional journals in the U.S.; Dye, 8 years ago, took a defunct newsletter and turned it into a viable, useful publication.

President Chapman announced more business from the SEAC Executive Committee meeting of the previous evening. The rule that only dues-paying members can give papers at SEAC meetings will be enforced. As of June 1, 1985, Life memberships will be raised to $200, and Family Life to $225.

The 1985 SEAC meeting will be in Birmingham, Alabama, November 7-9, at the Hyatt Birmingham. Marvin Jeter will be Program Chairman and Roger Nance will be Local Arrangements Chairman. Jeter announced his first formal Call for Papers and Symposia (see page 5 in this issue of the Newsletter for details).

The 1986 meeting has tentatively been set for Nashville, Tennessee, pending assurance of room rates comparable to those at the present meeting, and of adequate meeting rooms. The Local Arrangements Chairman will be Carl Kuttruff, and Robert Mainfort will be Program Chairman. Several sites are under consideration for the 1987 and subsequent meetings.

A Nominating Committee will soon be named to suggest candidates for the office of Treasurer-elect and Executive Officer I-elect; ballots will be mailed during Summer, 1985 (see page 5 for details).

The following Resolutions were read, and were unanimously approved:

(By Ian Brown) "Be it resolved that the members of SEAC would like to thank Judith Bense, the Program Chairperson and Conference Coordinator, for her efforts in making the Pensacola meeting a great success."

"Be it further resolved that the SEAC members gratefully acknowledge the contributions made by the University of West Florida to the success of the Pensacola meeting."

(By Jim Price) "Be it resolved that the members of SEAC gratefully acknowledge the role that William Marquardt, our past Editor, has had in establishing a firm foundation for the journal Southeastern Archaeology."

(By Vin Steponaitis) "Be it resolved that the SEAC membership would like to express our sincere appreciation to David Dye for his 8 years of service in producing our Newsletter."

(By James B. Griffin) "Charles Herron Fairbanks, a long-time member of the Southeastern Archaeological Conference and a leading figure in Southeastern United States archaeology, died July 17, 1984 after a long illness. The Executive Board of the SEAC has prepared the following resolution which will be conveyed to Evelyn Fairbanks, Chuck's widow:

Whereas, Charles H. Fairbanks was a member of the Southeastern Archaeological Conference for more than 40 years; and

Whereas, he served the membership of SEAC in many roles; and

Whereas, he has made numerous contributions to the science of archaeology in the Eastern United States; and

Whereas he has trained dozens of students in archaeology, many of whom are now members of the SEAC;

Then, be it resolved that the Southeastern Archaeological Conference honors the memory of Charles Fairbanks and dedicates this meeting of the Conference to him. A future issue of Southeastern Archaeology will also honor his memory and his contributions to archaeology." (see also page 6).

The following Announcements were made. Dick Marshall announced a June 1-2, 1985 meeting of the Mid-South Conference at Mississippi State University, on the "Development of Mississippian Culture" and called for papers. Jerry Milanich announced a "Golden Oldies" dance at this SEAC meeting on Friday evening, featuring the music of 1952 to 1968, or "from the publication of Griffin's Archaeology of Eastern U.S. to that of the Binford's New Perspectives." Judy Bense announced a tour of a nearby Deptford site after the meeting's conclusion on Saturday. David Brose moved that the effort to publish Bulletin 16, based on the 1972 SEAC meeting, be abandoned. After some discussion, the motion was approved. There being no other business, President Chapman adjourned the meeting at 5:58 PM.

FROM THE EXECUTIVE BOARD

In the past year Robert L. Stephenson, Director, Institute of Archaeology and Anthropology, University of South Carolina, and William H. Sears, Professor, Department of Anthropology, Florida Atlantic University retired from their respective institutions. The Board wishes to congratulate Dr. Stephenson and Dr. Sears for the successful careers each has enjoyed. The Board also wishes to recognize the important contributions that both have made to the development and growth of Southeastern archaeology. The Board wishes them well, with the hope that Dr. Stephenson and Dr. Sears will continue to contribute to archaeological research in the Southeast.

CALL FOR PAPERS AND SYMPOSIA 1985 SEAC MEETING, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

The 42nd annual meeting of the Southeastern Archaeological Conference (SEAC) will be held in Birmingham, Alabama, on November 7-9, 1985. The privilege of presenting papers will be restricted to paid-up members of SEAC.

Abstracts of papers must be received by the Program Chairman no later than August 30, 1985. An abstract must be a brief paper. See "Giving Papers" in American Antiquity 49:154-161 cited therein, or the AAA's Anthropology Newsletter for January, 1985, Page 11. "Say-nothing" abstracts, replete with phrases like "is described" or "is discussed" may be sent back for rewriting if time permits, or may be rejected.

Papers will be limited to 20 minutes. This is an ample amount of time, and session/symposium chairpeople will be keeping a tight schedule. About 7 pages (typed, double-spaced) is the maximum that can be read in 20 minutes. Please rehearse with a stopwatch and cut yours to 18 or 19! Again, see "Giving Papers," especially with regard to slides and other visual aids.

Symposia organizers must submit completed symposia proposals as a package to the Program Chairman, no later than August 30, 1985. The packages will include: a symposium abstract, abstracts of all papers in order, and name(s) of the discussant(s), if any. (Discussants should receive completed copies of all symposium papers well in advance of the meeting.)

Symposium papers should have a common theme. Topics which are too narrow (e.g., papers from one project, one locality, etc.) may be rejected, or combined with others to produce a symposium of broader interest. Abstracts of papers within a proposed symposium will be evaluated individually. Some proposed papers may be returned for rewriting, or rejected, if their abstracts are inadequate (see above) or if they are not clearly relevant to the symposium topic. Other papers may be substituted or added if they appear appropriate to the symposium.

Please notify the Program Chairman before August 30, 1985 if you will need any audio-visual equipment beyond the usual lectern with microphone and Carousel projector with remote control.

The Program Chairman for the 1985 Birmingham SEAC Meeting is: Marvin D. Jeter, CAA-KAC, Box 365, Kampsville, IL 62053.

Athens, GA--The Georgia Museum of Art presents a major exhibition, Georgia's Legacy: History Charted Through the Arts, April 25 through September 3. This show interprets Georgia's history through such objects as coastal and piedmont furniture, silver, textiles, paintings, iron work, ceramics, maps and Indian artifacts. More than 150 objects created by Georgia craftsmen before the Civil War comprise the most comprehensive collection of Georgia-made objects ever assembled.

Organized by the Georgia Museum of Art in celebration of the bicentennial of The University of Georgia, this exhibition is presented with the support of the Georgia Council for the Arts and Humanities and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

A fully illustrated catalogue is available in conjunction with the show. It features an essay and catalogue entries by Jane Webb Smith, guest curator of decorative arts and curator of the exhibition. Diana Williams Combs; Charles Hudson, Jr.; B. Phinzy Spalding; and Robert Willingham also contribute essays respectively concerning commemorative art in the mid-19th century, Georgia Indian art and artifacts, life in colonial Georgia, and archival maps of the state. For more information about the catalogue, write: Georgia Museum of Art, The University of Georgia, Athens, GA 30602.

CURRENT UIUC RESEARCH IN KENTUCKY

Archaeological research in the Mississippi River counties of western Kentucky continued in 1984-85 with support from the Kentucky Heritage Council and the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (UIUC). The past year's work consisted of three projects, all of which were under the direction of R.B. Lewis (UIUC). First, Charles B. Stout (UIUC) supervised the controlled surface collection of the Adams site (15FU4), a 7 ha Mississippi period town in the Bayou de Chien bottom. This site was mapped and test excavated in 1983 (see this column of a year ago). The data will form the core of Stout's Ph.D.

dissertation study of spatial segmentation and site growth patterns in this Mississippian community.

Second, Richard Edging (UIUC) supervised the mapping and test excavation of the Turk site (15CE6), a compact Mississippian mound group and village located along the Mississippi Valley bluffcrests about 10 km south of Wickliffe, Kentucky. The investigations demonstrated that the site is well preserved and may extend onto adjacent spurs and eroded bluffs. Excavations in the habitation area revealed a 0.5-1.0 m thick midden and abundant architectural features. The Turk site excavations will continue in 1985 as part of Edging's dissertation project on Mississippian cultural adaptations in the region.

Finally, Tom Sussenbach (UIUC) completed a pilot study survey of three transects in Carlisle and Hickman counties. The physiographic zones surveyed include interfluvial uplands, bluffcrests, and stream valleys tributary to the Mississippi River. The project is designed to provide preliminary information on the density and variety of sites in the area, and to test the methodology of a larger survey scheduled for the spring of 1985. -- R. Barry Lewis, Department of Anthropology, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

PUBLICATIONS

Perspectives on Gulf Coast Prehistory. DAVE D. DAVIS, editor. Ripley P. Bullen Monographs in Anthropology and History No. 5, University of Florida Press, Gainesville, 1984. xi + 379 pp., tables, maps, illustrations, bibliography, index. $24.50.

Southeastern archaeology has long taken its orientation from the interior river valleys, even though archaeologists have often been troubled by discrepancies between this traditional model and results of their work in coastal regions. Perspectives on Gulf Coast Prehistory is a response to these discrepancies. While they neither downplay the importance of the interior's influence nor regard the coast as a region in itself, the contributors to this book share a belief that the prehistory of the coastal area is different enough from the interior to justify studying it as a region.

The essays, both wide-ranging in concept and problem-oriented, cover the Woodland and the Mississippian periods of Gulf coast prehistory, from 1000 B.C. to the early European settlements around A.D. 1750. They investigate specific problems, focusing on traditional concerns with cultural chronologies as well as processes of social change, cultural interaction, and environmental adaptation. There are overviews of earlier research and a considerable body of previously unpublished material.

In keeping with the larger purpose of the conference at which these papers were presented, a concluding roundtable discussion concentrates on similarities among coastal cultures. Participants presented new research, pinpointed strong and weak points in existing work, and raised questions to stimulate further study.

McKeithen Weeden Island: The Culture of Northern Florida, A.D. 200-900. JERALD T. MILANICH, ANN S. CORDELL, VERNON JAMES KNIGHT, JR., TIMOTHY A. KOHLER, and BRENDA J. SIGLER-LAVELLE. Academic Press, New York, 1984. 256 pp. $44.50.

This volume presents an overview of the Weeden Island culture. It is intended to be both an investigation of the specific Weeden Island culture that occupied North Florida during the first millennium A.D. and a case study of Weeden Island cultures in general. Thus, on one level it is a report of recent investigations in northern Florida. But it is also a study of the processes of evolution of Southeast aboriginal societies, an investigation of pre-Mississippian period developments.

Detailed technological analyses of pottery from both village and mound contexts allow the authors to make definitive statements about the presence within the culture of craft specialization, the manufacturing dichotomy between secular and ceremonial wares, and the origins of manufacture of pottery. These data are the first of their kind for any Weeden Island culture.

Anthropology No. 35, 1983. xi + 236 pp., figures, tables, appendices. $11.50. (Available from TVA, Mapping Services Branch, 200 Haney Building, Chattanooga, TN 37401.)

The 1976 excavations at the site of the Cherokee village of Tomotley (40MR5) on the Little Tennessee River exposed 98,595 square feet of surface area. Following the removal of the plowzone with a self-loading pan, 147 features and 18 burials were excavated. A total of 2198 postmolds was exposed and 19 structures were identified. Identification procedures were applied to 14,051 aboriginal ceramic sherds, 6150 lithic artifacts, 11,893 Euro-American items, 4.85 kg of botanical material, and 13,998 animal bones and shell fragments.

The assemblage of artifacts collected suggests that the site area has been occupied since the Early Archaic (7900-6100 B.C.). The most extensive occupations consisted of a Mississippian I/II (Martin Farm/Hiwassee Island, A.D. 900-1300) component represented by at least two structures and the apparent basal portion of one Woodland or early Mississippian burial mound or cemetery (ca. A.D. 700), and a Cherokee occupation which produced the largest amount of material. Ethnohistoric accounts suggest that the historic village may have been founded and occupied by Lower, Middle, and Valley Cherokee refugees between 1751 and 1776. Archaeological evidence (structure form and ceramic types) supports this. Because archaeologically the site appears to represent a rather short-term occupation with very little feature overlap, it provides evidence of clear patterns in refuse disposal practices and space utilization.

Archaeological Investigations at the Eighteenth Century Overhill Cherokee Town of Mialoquo. KURT C. RUSS and JEFFERSON CHAPMAN. Department of Anthropology, University of Tennessee, Report of Investigations No. 37 and Tennessee Valley Authority Publications in Anthropology No. 36. 1983. xii + 146 pp., figures, tables. $9.50. (Available from TVA, Mapping Services Branch, 200 Haney Building, Chattanooga, TN 37401).

The 1976 and 1977 excavations at the historic Overhill Cherokee town of Mialoquo (40MR3) are summarized. These investigations, as a part of the University of Tennessee, Department of Anthropology, Tellico Archaeological Project, exposed by mechanical stripping 30,600 ft² in five areas. In total, eight structures, 692 postmolds, and 81 features were recorded. An artifact assemblage composed of 4982 lithic, 6677 ceramic, 2987 faunal, and 4648 Euro-American artifacts along with 1391.7 grams of carbonized plant remains are described and discussed. Analysis suggests minor occupations by Archaic, Woodland, and Mississippian groups preceded the principal occupation by the Overhill Cherokee. Ethnohistoric data along with temporally diagnostic Euro-American artifacts suggest that the site was occupied from ca. 1760 to at least 1776. The occurrence of Qualla series ceramic along with frequent stamped ceramic surface treatment lend support to documented accounts of Middle and Lower Town Cherokee immigrants in the Little Tennessee River valley after 1760. The data presented are particularly relevant to ongoing studies of Overhill Cherokee acculturation and to a more detailed examination of site structure and patterning.

The Prehistory of North Carolina. MARK A. MATHIS and JEFFREY J. CROW, editors. North Carolina Division of Archives and History, Department of Cultural Resources, Raleigh. xvi + 206 pp., tables, figures, index. $6.00 (paper).

The papers in this volume by archaeologists David S. Phelps, H. Trawick Ward, Burton L. Purrington, and Joffre L. Coe, offer a contemporary view of what we know about North Carolina's prehistoric past. The authors discuss the history of archaeological research in the state and offer their own thoughts about future directions of study. This volume will provide a valuable source book for the amateur, student, and professional archaeologist alike.

The Archaeology of Sol Legare Island, Charleston County, South Carolina. MICHAEL TRINKLEY. Publications in Archaeological Research, Chicora Foundation, Research Series No. 1. 1984. 47 pp., tables, figures, plates. $5.00.

This volume discusses recent test excavations at an Early Woodland non-shell midden site on the coast of South Carolina. The site contained late Thom's Creek phase ceramics, including two varieties of simple stamped pottery. The pottery shows a possible transition to the succeeding Deptford series. A probable Thom's Creek structure was also identified.

Remember Man Thou Art Dust: Coffin Hardware of the Early Twentieth Century. DEBI HACKER-NORTON and MICHAEL TRINKLEY. Publications in Archaeological Research, Chicora Foundation, Research Series No. 2. 1984. 45 pp., tables, figures, plates. $10.00.

This publication describes and illustrates a large collection of unused late nineteenth and early twentieth century coffin hardware from a South Carolina general store. Information from advertisements, trade journals, and trade catalogs is used to offer suggestions on dating, status, and archaeological implications.

Missouri: Naiades: A Guide to the Mussels of Missouri. RONALD D. OESCH. Missouri Department of Conservation, Jefferson City, 1984. 280 pp. $5.50 (paper).

This volume includes all of the unionids found in the state of Missouri. The range maps include the reported archaeological occurrence of each species. Each species is figured, a common name is listed, the reproductive period is given, and the anatomical and shell characters are discussed.
