INTRODUCTION

Steve Williams once called the pottery types in the Southeast the "many headed monster". Well, the monster is growing by leaps and bounds. The preliminary edition of this bibliography distributed at the 22nd Southeastern Archaeological Conference held at Macon, Georgia, in 1965, contained 969 type names. The total has now gone over 2,000, part of this due to the addition of types from areas outside the Southeast, although the largest percent of types are still from the states participating in the Southeastern Archaeological Conference.

This bibliography includes the area east of the Rocky Mountains, with the exception of the Southwest, which could probably add another 2,000 type names to the list. Also included are a few types from Alaska, some of which have been discussed at various meetings of the Southeastern Archaeological Conference.

Two lists are included other than the bibliography: one listing the type names by surface treatment or decoration (Part II) and the other listing the types by geographical areas (Part I). Any errors in these two lists can be blamed on the ignorance of the compiler. Dividing the pottery types into geographical areas was quite difficult, since there is much overlapping of areas. In many instances the types are listed in two or three different areas.

Several of the references do not have page numbers, and a space has been left for future addition. Also there are a few type names for which no reference was found. These have been included and a supplemental sheet will be issued as soon as the reference is located.
